

HHP and NCR Agree to License Terms

January 15, 2004 at 11:49 AM EST

SKANEATELES FALLS, N.Y., Jan. 15 /PRNewswire-FirstCall/ -- HHP, the global leader in image-based data collection solutions for mobile, wireless, and display-based transaction terminals and NCR Corporation, a global leader in retail store-automation solutions, announced today that an agreement in principle has been reached in which HHP will license NCR signature capture patent number 6,539,363. This agreement will allow HHP to incorporate NCR's signature capture intellectual property into its full lineup of advanced transaction terminals.

"We are thrilled that HHP and NCR were able to agree on this very important issue," stated Kevin Jost, President, CEO of HHP. "HHP's transactional terminal technology in conjunction with NCR's signature capture intellectual property will allow HHP to deliver a superior solution to retailers requiring flexible and cost effective platforms with signature capture capabilities."

"The solid HHP product line is backed by a strong tradition of quality and innovation," said Pete Bartolotta, Vice President, Product Management, for NCR's Retail Solutions Division. "We are pleased with HHP's recognition -- as demonstrated through this agreement -- of the value that NCR's signature capture technology brings to their advanced transaction terminals and end customers."
