

NCR Announces Deals Totaling $10 Million With Leading Indian Banks; NCR Providing ATMs and Maintenance Services for SBI's and ICICI's Expanding Networks

May 13, 2002 at 10:35 AM EDT

LONDON, May 13, 2002 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- NCR Corporation (NYSE:NCR) today announced that it has concluded automated teller machine (ATM) and maintenance services deals with a combined value of over $10 million with two major Indian banks, State Bank of India (SBI) and ICICI Bank.

SBI and ICICI are the two largest banks in India and both are expanding rapidly in the financial self-service market. Each of these banks now have an installed base of over 1,000 ATMs and have announced plans to double that figure by March 2003.

NCR has long-standing relationships with SBI and ICICI and is by far their leading supplier of ATMs. In addition to providing over 600 ATMs, NCR is providing maintenance services for these units.

Keith Taylor, senior vice president of NCR's Financial Solutions division, said, "We identified India as a key market some time ago and invested while the market was in the early stages of development. This enabled us to build good relationships with the leading banks."

"Our initial efforts have paid off, as NCR is well positioned as the market leader in India," said Taylor. "We are experiencing rapid growth in demand for financial self-service hardware and service support, and are continuing to invest heavily in this market."
